

THE WORLD TRUCKS BLOG

Navistar's Spiral of Despair. Gathering Speed.

Thanks to CL for the tip-off.

We are used to Navistar's documented and recorded view that SCR is 'Toxic and volatile'. We have chuckled at Breathe-E-Z Hebe's comments regarding respirators. We have squinted at MWM's deployment of SCR in Brazil, whilst its parent company Navistar sues the EPA, alleging that SCR is possessed of an inherent lethality. This is the Navistar that we know and love.

What, then, do we make of the latest accusation to be leveled at SCR?

"We think SCR is a very viable technology. We can't find anything negative about it." So says Tim Schick, Director of Business and Product Strategy at - er - Navistar.

WTF? These people are putting the satirist community out of business.

Posted by Oliver Dixon on September 17, 2009 5:21 PM | Permalink